

INTERSTATE ENFORCEMENT

Sometimes a parent with a child support obligation in Wisconsin lives in another state. Federal law requires states to cooperate with each other in child support enforcement. The Child Support Agency will provide your case information to the other state and ask them to establish a new order or enforce an existing one. The other state will then provide all support enforcement. Paternity can also be established across state lines.